

Burrinjuck Dam

FACT SHEET

FACTS AND FIGURES

- Burrinjuck Dam was the first major dam built for irrigation in NSW and the fourth largest dam in the world when construction began.
- Construction of the dam began in 1909, but due to delays caused by labour and material shortages during WWI, the original design was not completed until 20 years later. However irrigation supplies from the dam began in 1912.
- The dam holds 1,026,000 ML of water, almost twice as much water as Sydney Harbour.
- Burrinjuck Dam covers an area of 5,500 ha, or more than 8,000 football fields. The catchment area is 12,953 km², which is larger than the catchment area of the whole of the snowy mountains.
- The name Burrinjuck comes from the Aboriginal words “booren yiack”, meaning precipitous mountain.
- The dam is appropriately named as it lies between the Barren Jack and Black Andrew Mountains.
- Burrinjuck Dam supplies water for towns, river flows, stock and domestic requirements, irrigated agriculture, industry, flood mitigation and environmental flows.
